Free adventure hosted by DCR and Boston Natural Areas Network

BOSTON, MA, March 16, 2009 – Have you ever wondered what lives inside the shelter of a phragmites reed bed at a salt marsh? Then join Boston Natural Areas Network and the Department of Conservation and Recreation for an interesting nature walk and canoe adventure on Saturday, April 11th at Belle Isle Marsh Reservation in East Boston.

Participants will get to discover normally inaccessible areas of the salt marsh beginning at 10:00 a.m. to explore the marsh and seek wildlife. The group will meet in the parking lot at the Bennington Street entrance to the reservation. Registration is required for the free event, but space is limited, and participants must be age 12 or older. Call 617-542-7696 or email info@bostonnatural.org to register or for further information.
